Pittsburgh Vintage Grand Prix

The Pittsburgh Vintage Grand Prix represents more than a motorsports event. It's also an opportunity to give back to the community. On February

19, during the Pittsburgh Auto Show, grand prix organizers presented a check for $340,000 to its charities, the Autism Society of Pittsburgh and Merakey

Allegheny Valley School. That figure pushes total charity funds raised by the grand prix to date past the $6 million mark.

This year's Pittsburgh Vintage Grand Prix celebrates its 40th anniversary July 10-25 with hometown hero Ray Shaffer, Porsche Classic market development manager at Porsche Cars North America, serving as grand marshal.

IT'S ALIVE AT LANE MOTOR MUSEUM

Wanna see something wacky come to life? Stop by the Lane Motor Museum in Nashville at 11 a.m. each day for a vehicle demonstration. Could be a propeller-driven car, perhaps something amphibious, or maybe a rarity with just three wheels.

BACK IN THE SKYLINE SADDLE

Nismo, Nissan's performance arm, started restoring the brand's famed Skyline GT-R models a few years ago.

Nissan recently put Michael Krumm, one of its retired drivers, behind the wheel of a restored R32-chassis Skyline GT-R and then shared his feedback on YouTube.

As he was just 19 when the model was released in 1989, he explains, he never got to experience a fresh, tight example—until now. “The impression was a little bit like time travel for me,” he says after driving the restored car. “It was like I was back to 19 and I had this toy in my hands.”
